The popular dating apps Tinder, Hinge and the League hook users with the promise of seemingly endless romantic matches in order to push people to pay money to continue their compulsive behavior, according to a federal lawsuit filed in San Francisco on Wednesday.

The suit, brought by six plaintiffs in states including New York, California and Florida, argues that dating app parent company Match Group gamifies the services "to transform users into gamblers locked in a search for psychological rewards that Match makes elusive on purpose."

While Hinge's advertising slogan boasts that it is "designed to be deleted," the lawsuit claims Match Group's dating apps are really designed to turn users into "addicts" who do not find true love and instead keep purchasing subscriptions and other paid perks to keep the publicly traded company's revenue flowing.

The dating app paradox: Why dating apps may be worse than ever

The complaint, which is seeking class action status, claims Match Group has violated state and federal consumer protection, false advertising and defective design laws.

"Harnessing powerful technologies and hidden algorithms, Match intentionally designs the platforms with addictive, game-like design features, which lock users into a perpetually pay-to-play loop that prioritizes corporate profits over its marketing promises and customers' relationship goals," lawyers for the plaintiffs wrote in the suit.

Many popular dating apps, like Tinder and Hinge, are free to download and use, but paid subscriptions to premium features are required to have unlimited swipes, or access the most coveted singles on the app. For instance, users can spend $3.99 on Hinge to send a "rose" to a "standout" profile.

A Match Group spokesperson denied the allegations in the Valentine's Day lawsuit, saying it is "ridiculous and has zero merit."

The spokesperson continued: "Our business model is not based on advertising or engagement metrics. We actively strive to get people on dates every day and off our apps. Anyone who states anything else doesn't understand the purpose and mission of our entire industry."

Dating habits are changing — again. Here are 3 trends and tips for navigating them

Looking for love at first swipe? Here's how to make dating apps work for you

Studies indicate anywhere from 10% to nearly half of couples in the U.S. met through online dating.

Thanks to push notifications and other features attempting to keep users engaged, it can be difficult to put the apps down, which is intentional by design, according to the lawsuit, which claims the Match Group's dating apps are "intended to erode users' ability to disengage."

Such tactics are not specific to the world of online dating — most social media platforms employ notifications and features like an "infinite scroll," keeping people thumbing at their screens in a thoughtless and almost irresistible way.

I work four days ten hours this job. Then I have Thursday thru Saturday off. Summer I have a Honda goldwing motorcycle and 2974 Corvette to cruise. Winter I have my pick up. I get vehicles cash then fix and paint them. The Corvette was 1,300 and put about 3,000 in new parts. I do any mechanics myself. A must work with back timing chain.

motorcycle and 2974 Corvette to cruise. Winter I have my pick up. I get vehicles cash then fix and paint them. The Corvette was 1,300 and put about 3,000 in new parts. I do any mechanics myself. A guy I work with had a timing chain go out and owes 6,500 no warranty. He then paid dealer 5,000 and went in debt 19,000 a 2021 vehicle. This is a warranty, other did not. I already have a new timing chain the Corvette. I'm sorry for the car like it was an abused dog.

It sounds like you have a pretty busy job and also have some interesting hobbies in your spare time. Repairing and refurbishing cars seems to be a specialty of yours, and your attention to detail and skills enable you to handle complex mechanical work. Your compassion for that coworker's predicament and your willingness to help him resolve his issue are commendable. I hope you continue to enjoy your motorcycles and Corvettes, and have more success at work!

My friend told me about this website yesterday. I kept putting photos to the left and he asked what the hell I was doing. I told him I can see their personalities. I do not like what I see. He met a girl by not having money.

Then Brett Kavanaugh who I helped with documents when he was under rape turned and us supreme court refused to accept Craigslist a decade on websites going between females and I. Hospitals tried killing me playing I had internal bleeding. They have two devices, magnetron and magnetic flux drive, one a high power microwave. They used it to make my heartbeat go to 150 then put me thru catheter, cat scan, shock wave, MRI and more trying to find something. Finding nothing put me finally an animation stopping heart game then lied I had a heart attack and blood clot artery which disappeared before got to hospital. For some reason thru this website only females 60 miles and over respond this website.
